

BIOGRAPHY

UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

COLONEL PATRICK C. WILLIAMS

Colonel Patrick C. Williams is the Commander, 2d Weather Group, 557th Weather Wing, Offutt AFB, Nebraska. He leads more than 550 active duty, civil service and contract personnel comprised of 6 Squadrons and 8 geographically separated units on 3 continents. The group operates and sustains the Air Force's $323M strategic weather enterprise, delivering decision-quality, authoritative space and terrestrial environmental intelligence in support of national security objectives.

Prior to his current assignment, Colonel Williams was the Space Branch Chief and Joint Staff METOC Operations Officer on the Joint Staff. He was the Joint Chief of Staff's focal point for all DOD METOC activities and the Head of Delegation to NATO for METOC issues.

Colonel Williams received his commission from the United States Air Force Academy in May 1998. He became well versed in aviation, space and Army weather operations and held a wide variety of positions to include squadron commander, command weather briefer, flight commander, staff weather officer, program element monitor, executive officer and aide-de-camp.

Additionally, Colonel Williams also served two combat tours; the first in support of Operation IRAQI FREEDOM as a flight commander, in charge of 2 Battlefield Weather Teams. His second combat tour was in support of Operation ENDURING FREEDOM as the Squadron Commander of the 19th Expeditionary Weather Squadron in charge of 235 rotating Battlefield Weather Forecasters at 15 different Forward Operating Bases throughout Afghanistan.
